

Privacy Policy

A plain account of what we collect when you visit or work with us, why we collect it, and what say you have over it.

Last updated: 11 September 2026

01 Who is responsible for your data

This policy covers rightintellectual.com and any personal information you share with us when you get in touch, request a proposal, or engage us for advisory work. The entity responsible for that information is RISE Ltd, trading as Right Intellectual, registered in the Dubai International Financial Centre, United Arab Emirates. We handle personal data in line with the DIFC Data Protection Law, DIFC Law No. 5 of 2020, and its regulations.

02 What we actually collect

We try to keep this to what we genuinely need. Depending on how you interact with us, that can include:

Category	Examples	When
Contact details	Name, email, phone number, company name	When you fill in a form, email us, or request a call
Engagement information	Matter details, documents you share, correspondence	Once you become a client and we take on a piece of work
Billing information	Invoicing details, payment method references	For paid engagements
Usage data	Pages viewed, browser type, approximate location, device information	Automatically, whenever you visit the site
Cookies	Session identifiers, analytics identifiers	Through your browser, as described below

We don't ask for anything beyond what's needed to respond to you, run a matter properly, or understand how the site is being used.

03 Why we collect it

- To respond to you. If you contact us or ask for a proposal, we need your details to reply.
- To deliver an engagement. Advisory work on intellectual property matters requires the documents and information relevant to that matter.

- To bill correctly. Where we've agreed paid work, we need enough billing information to invoice you accurately.
 - To understand and improve the site. Usage data tells us which pages are useful and where visitors get stuck.
 - To meet our legal obligations. Some records, particularly billing and engagement records, need to be kept for regulatory or tax reasons.

04 Cookies and similar tools

The site uses a small number of cookies. Some are strictly necessary, they let the site function and can't be switched off. Others are analytics cookies that help us understand traffic patterns, page by page, in aggregate. We don't use cookies to build advertising profiles of visitors or to sell data to advertisers. You can control or clear cookies through your browser settings at any time, though doing so may affect how parts of the site behave.

05 Who we share it with

We don't sell personal data, full stop. We do share it with a short list of parties who help us run the firm and the site:

- Cloud hosting and email providers who store or transmit data on our behalf, under confidentiality obligations.
- Payment processors, for handling invoicing and billing where relevant.
- Analytics providers, for aggregated, non identifying insight into site usage.
- Regulators, courts, or other authorities, where we're legally required to disclose information.
- Professional partners you've explicitly asked us to coordinate with on your matter.

Anyone we share data with is bound to protect it and use it only for the purpose we've engaged them for.

06 Where your data is stored

Our service providers may store or process data outside the DIFC or the United Arab Emirates. Where that happens, we take reasonable steps to make sure the provider offers a comparable standard of protection, whether through contractual safeguards or their own recognized certifications.

07 How long we keep it

07How long we keep it

General enquiry details are kept only as long as needed to respond to you, typically no more than a couple of years if nothing further develops. Engagement and billing records are kept for as long as required under applicable regulatory and tax rules, which is often several years after a matter closes. When there's no remaining legal or business reason to keep something, we delete it.

08Keeping it secure

We restrict access to personal data to the people who actually need it to do their work, use encryption for data in transit, and rely on reputable providers for hosting and storage. No system is perfectly secure, and if something ever goes wrong in a way that affects you, we'll tell you directly and promptly rather than let you find out some other way.

09Your rights

Under the DIFC Data Protection Law, you can ask us to:

- Confirm what personal data we hold about you and give you a copy of it.
- Correct anything that's inaccurate or out of date.
- Delete data we no longer have a valid reason to keep.
- Restrict or object to certain uses of your data.
- Provide your data in a portable format, where that's technically feasible.

To exercise any of these, just email us using the contact details below. We'll respond within the timeframe the law requires, and if we can't action a request for a specific reason, we'll explain why rather than simply decline.

10Children

Our services are aimed at businesses and professionals, not children. We don't knowingly collect personal data from anyone under 18, and if we become aware that we have, we'll delete it.

11Changes to this policy

We may update this policy from time to time, most often to reflect a new tool we're using or a change in the law. The date at the top of this page always reflects the latest version, and for anything significant, we'll flag the change rather than let it pass quietly.

12Contact us

If you have a question about this policy or want to exercise any of your rights, reach us through the contact details published on rightintellectual.com. We handle privacy questions personally, not through an automated queue.
